LEADERSHIP SEMINAR SERIES SYNOPSIS

This leadership seminar series provides insights about developing and sustaining personal and organizational leadership from top management through the frontline. Success in today's world is challenging and the rules are changing. Challenges facing us today will become even more intense, speed of change will increase and competition will be more powerful.

To lead oneself and create an organization that will maintain a competitive advantage many leaders will have to transform a culture founded on yesterday's paradigms and ideas. Priorities will shift and thinking will have to change. Attitudes and behaviors reflecting new and different social and organizational values will have to be adapted. For many people learning to adjust and to change will be difficult and managing change will present even greater challenges. Personal and organizational success will depend on leadership focused on positive results.

Once you are aware of the scope, difficulty, risks and benefits associated with undertaking or not undertaking leadership development you will be able to make informed decisions about taking the next leadership development step.
